

JPACTe Table of Contents
Volume 3, Number 2, Fall, 2008

Research and Theory

Kayler, M., and Swanson, K., George Mason University
Traditional university-based teacher development program models learner-centered constructivist practice

Rinaldo, V., Erwin, R., & Phillips, D. K., Niagara University.
Improving the writing scores of students at risk through arts-based instruction

Myers, J., Ontario Institute for Studies in Education
Book review: ENGAGING teens in their own learning – 8 keys to student success (2008) by Paul Vermette

Voices from the Field

Best Practices

Pelech, J., Benedictine University, and Singer, R., Webster University (emeritus)
Making connections: Expanding the bridging question strategy

Constructivist Classrooms

Jones, J., Emmet Belnap Middle School, Lockport, NY, &
Jones, K., Tapestry High School, Buffalo, NY
Applying the ENGAGING framework in constructivist classrooms: Interviews with master educators – Part I

Constructivist Teacher Education

Heckendorn, R., Manhattanville College
Using “orbitals” in constructivist classrooms

Vermette, P., Niagara University
Teaching constructivism: Day one of a course on teaching